Crafting can be both enjoyable and simple with a variety of easy projects. For instance, you can transform empty paper rolls into decorative items or bird feeders, and decorate mason jars for vases or storage. Creating handmade greeting cards with cardstock, markers, and stickers offers a personal touch, while rock painting turns smooth stones into charming garden decorations. Fabric scraps can be used for DIY bookmarks or coasters, and beaded bracelets make for fun and customizable accessories. Simple origami projects, button art, and painted rocks are also great ways to express creativity and make unique gifts.

The youngest students, those in LKG, participated in a playful competition titled "Pool and Land Play." This event involved activities that were a combination of water-based fun and land-based challenges, encouraging sensory development and motor skills in a playful environment. The children enjoyed splashing in small pools and completing small tasks on land, which made the event both engaging and exciting for them. For the students of UKG, a traditional and much-loved game of musical chairs was organized. As the music played, the children enthusiastically circled around the chairs, trying to grab a seat when the music stopped. The thrill of the game brought out lively competition among the students, while also teaching them about quick thinking and alertness. The first-grade students participated in a "Water Filling" competition, which involved filling containers with water as quickly and accurately as possible. The students exhibited great enthusiasm and energy during this competition. The second-grade students took part in a unique "Ribbon Concentration" game, designed to improve focus and dexterity. In this event, students were required to concentrate on threading ribbons through specific targets in a race against time. The activity not only entertained the students but also helped sharpen their fine motor skills and patience. In a high-energy event, the third-grade students engaged in a fun-filled "Pop the Balloon" competition. The aim was to burst as many balloons as possible within a given time frame. The excitement of running around and popping balloons added to the thrill of the day, making it one of the most enjoyable activities for the students. The fourth-grade students participated in a "Ball Passing" competition, a group activity that required quick reflexes and coordination. Teams of students passed a ball to each other in rapid succession, aiming to complete the task without dropping the ball.
